Atlanta Streets, Slippery, Scene of 40 Auto Accidents During Two Days of Snow and Ice.

Atlanta's chances of enjoying its first white Christmas are fast fading as clearing skies help to loosen the icy grip of King Winter which has been clamped on the southland for the past few days, causing scores of injuries and deaths and running property losses up into the hundreds of thousands. Local transportation and communication facilities were severely hampered Monday due to the heavy covering of snow and ice, Georgia Power Company officials reporting the worst traffic tie-up in more than 10 years. A total of 22 minor accidents involving street cars occurred Sunday, it was stated, and this number was boosted to more than 40 Monday. Navigation was particularly difficult along Forsyth street, at the corner of Forrest and Piedmont avenues and at Hunter and Pryor streets. The telephone company reported an increase of 100 in the number of phones temporarily out of commission but no down heavy loss in this locality. Lighting OPPORTUNITY FAMILIES service was interrupted in some sections of the city for short periods.

"Fair and colder" is the official forecast for this morning but the afternoon will see a slow but steady temperature rise to approximately 35 degrees, according to the prognostication of the local weather bureau.

Slush, it would seem, not snow, will be the order of Christmas Day. A few scattered patches of the ice blan-ket probably will remain in evidence-for a day or so, bureau officials point-ed out, but the thawing-out process will be too far advanced by Wednes-day to allow any great indulgence in "winter sports."

The probability of this forecast is attested to by the slushy streets of Monday. The thermometer Monday morning showed 27 degrees. It was 23 at noon and 25 at 2 o'clock. Despite this, however, a beaming sun caused sufficient melting to make the going exceedingly damp for pedestrians and motorists.

The cold wave that was climaxed with a snow and sleet blanket covering most of the southern states, except Florida and a fringe along the Gulf of Mexico, moved in last Thursday, sending thermometers plunging from balmy heights and causing half a dozen deaths from freezing or exposure through Monday.

The snow that began melting over a wide area Monday reached record heights at some places and caused a general slowing up of traffic. Damage to its lines in nine southern states was placed at $500,000 Monday by headquarters of the Southern Bell Telephone Company here.

BY R. E. POWELL. The "procedural" plan of the inerstate commerce commission to consolidate all the railroads into 19 big systems has Atlanta railroad circles considerably puzzled, both as to the probabilities of ultimate accomplishment and as to the operating benefits and enhancement of property. Appraisal of the plan in general terms Monday by spokesmen for some of the lines reflected a strong tendency to see in the merger program, of congress, more of a move of finan-cial interests to bring about an ex-change of securities than any prac-tical step to improve the nation's means of transportation.

Groupings affecting the Southern, the Louisville & Nashville, the N., C. & St. L., the Central of Georgia, and the Seaboard, five principal carriers entering Atlanta, together with minor roads, are included in the report of the commission. Extensive mileage would be added to the Southern and Atlantic Coast Line under the plan advanced while, presumably, the N., C. & St. L., and the Louisville & Nashville would surrender identities to the Atlantic Coast Line and the identity of the Central of Georgia would be relinquished to the Illinois Central. Men Place Women in Front To Stop British Bullets.

LONDON, Dec. 23.—(AP)—The number of those killed in rioting in southeast Nigeria, British West Africa, has now grown to at least 43 women and 1 man. In explaining the large number of casualties among the women, Dr. D. and drowned. Ten other women died of gunshot wounds later.

Another group of 6 women were shot and killed in a second riot at Abaka two days later when a mob attacked government headquarters. During still other riots at Aba and the Imo river district some European women were reported to have been assaulted and traders and administrative officers molested. As the result of the quick and stern measures of the British the general situation was reported well in hand, although the natives were still sullen and restless.

The exact cause of the riots has not been definitely ascertained. Some reports attributed it to a fall in prices of native products, and others to erroneous reports that a poll tax was to be levied on women.

Certain men see a preponderance of hypocrisy and shame, cenflict and cruelty in the world. Others for various reasons assert that life here is as meaningless as it is hopeless, and that all would be far better off had they never been born. They argue these positions earnestly. If they really mean what they say, why do they persist in living? Why not try their chances in another existence?

They hold them but are not held by them. Their attitude toward God and the universe enables them to gratify a pronounced superiority complex by "Penguin Island." like "Pilgrim's Progress." is an allegory. But Anatole France was no Bunyan. The most modern of pagans, learned, industrious, ironical, satirical and brilliant withal, at heart he was a weak and disenchanted materialist, with no consistent philosophy of life, unless it was the old cry: "Vanity of vanities; all is vanity."

The world had palled on him and he clothed his disillusions with rhetorical masterpieces which scarcely concealed the moral ugliness beneath their deftly woven texture. Since he was convinced of the mockery of his own existence, he was always alert to satirize it. If possible, read his speech at the unveiling of a public monument to himself. It is replete with rapierlike thrusts of sardonic humor. He referred to sex irregularities with tranquil amiability, instigated by his habits, and for the same reason his fictional characters guilty of these offenses got off scott free. To a virtuous eye they are repulsive and in so tar as this is the case they fail, for to Anatole France, beauty was the sole justification of art.

You will be told by critics of a sort "Penguin Island," like "Pilgrim" pronounced superiority complex by pouring contempt on things as they are. Yet the dinner bell seldom rings in vain for them and the majority manifest a keen relish for the ma-terial benefits of the civilization they affect to despise.

Here and there are mournful spirits who have suffered dire misfortune and to them life may appear meaningless and hopeless. HOW GHASTLY IS THAT GASTRIC GAS?

A news story of a medical meeting where Dr. Crile elucidated a new hypothesis he is working on, having to do with the cause and treatment of ulcer of the stomach, describes some of the experimental research and its application to "neidity of the gas." its application to "acidity of the gas-tric organ." Why is man here? In what way does his race further the plan of he universe? In a world where all things are useful, one serving another and sup-

Garabaldi was awarded his freedom after the legal firm of Hill & Minhinnett filed the writ. He is the second of a large group released from the penitentiary where they were incarcerated after their conviction in Cincinnati on charges of being implicated in a $2,000,000 mril truck robbery.

Last week Joe Bertsche, of Chicago, was freed on habeas corpus proceedings brought by the same firm.

Garabaldi is about 42 years old and is said to be wealthy from the profits which the government contends he reaped in a séries of stick-up jobs in which he and more than 60 other members of a ring participated in from Chicago to Los Angeles.

When the men were arrested at Cincinnati they posted $400.000 bonds. Two other members of the ring are still in the prison and have not yet applied for habeas corpus proceedings on which the others were released. They are Joe Blue, of Chicago, and Joseph Cameron.

The mayor therefore ordered the release of the 35 city prisoners in time for Christmas.

Bertsche and Garabaldi were released on the habeas corpus writs after their attorneys held they had served the maximum sentence which could be imposed—two years—in a conspiracy to rob charge.

They were convicted on two counts, both of which grew out of the same transaction, and the court of appeals held the maximum sentence could be only two years. They were found guilty on both counts and sentenced to serve two years on each of them. Decision of the higher court prevents them from being forced to remain in the prison for the final two years.

Sprinkler-cars were filled with a calcium chloride and with a phermide solution, and proceeded to sprinkle the new fallen snow. Immediately the snow turned to slush and, after traffic had passed over the street for a brief period, the slush melted into water. The chemicals, it was claimed, not only caused the snow to melt, but prevented the resultant water from freezing. If the plan proves a complete success it will be used widely in snow removal operations here this winter. In what is generally regarded as probably the most illogical grouping of the 19 systems is the Wabash-Seaboard consolidation, which would include the Georgia railroad. The Fess step represented the only additional approach to the subject to-day in official circles. Railroad commentators were a unit in expecting that no programs are likely to be presented soon from carrier quarters looking toward the linking of any group of carriers under the plan. It was pointed out that the legal and operating staffs of all carriers must have weeks for study of the details: that only three or four railroad groups in the country are actually seeking to take advantage of the present pro-visions of law permitting consolida-tion; and that the commission plan seriously modifies all the rail merger projects that have been actually ad-

THREE INDOOR SHOWS SLATED FOR JANUARY

Legion Opens Sale Today for Goodrich-Baker Battle.

By Ben Cothran.

Attempts to inveigle Atlanta's sports clan from home and fireside next month are going to be many. Dangling right before your eyes are two boxing shows and a wrestling match, not to mention New Year's

There is considerable scurrying about among the boxing people of the city, striving more than ever to put pugilism back on its feet. The American Legion is going a very long way toward accomplishing that end by importing Jack Dempsey and Sammy Baker from New York; Dempsey to referee and Baker to fight Ted Goodrich. That will happen on January 7.

sey to referee and Baker to fight Ted Goodrich. That will happen on January 7.

On January 22 Young Stribling will perform here with some one to be named by Max Abelson, local promoter, who tentatively named January 22 as the date Monday night. New Year's night, the first one of the year, provides an opportunity for lovers of the grunt and squeal game to witness a wrestling show as presented by Henry Webber, lately come to town to present wrestling shows. Friday night S. C. Roby is staging one of his all-colored bouts that have proven so popular with fight fans.

The Legion is opening headquarters this morning on the Peachtree street side of the Piedmont hotel to handle tickets and purvey information. T. B. Hermes, commander of the Legion post, said Monday night that requests for tickets had been rolling in thick and fast since announcement was made that Dempsey would be here.

Railroads are co-operating with the Legion and will offer special rates to Atlanta on the day of the fight. The auditorium is expected to be filled to capacity when Goodrich, pride of Atlanta, steps out to meet the tough top-kick from New York, Sergeant Baker.

Goodrich returned Monday from the north Georgia mountains, where he has been resting up a bit since his engagement last week with Clyde Hull, from whom he won a clean-cut decision. Ted is hard at work for this bout with Baker. A victory will push him right up in the very forefront of "the welterweight ranks and he will be at his best for the big January 7 show.

Roby Works On Program.

Holiday season holds no fears for Cleve Roby, Atlanta's demon promoter of things fistic, for Mr. Roby is braving not only deffated pocket books but the competition of Christmas enthusiam, too, and Friday night in the auditorium will offer another sethe auditorium will offer another series of negro fights which he firmly believes will draw as well at the gate as any of the shows he has placed before the public.

Of Lawson's ability there is no ques-tion nereabouts since his two sensa-tional matches with the gigantic Al Walker, of New York, and the Happy Walker, of New York, and the Happy Hunter partisans can attest to the natural fighting skill of Henry Johnson after seeing him twice against the rugged and courageous Happy.

It seems very probable that this Friday night engagement will prove as entertaining as any of Lawson's previous turns here. Henry Johnson is no pushover by any manner of means, and in his daily workouts at Roby's and in his daily workouts at Roby's gym on Decatur street he looks thor-oughly able to give Fighting Bob a run for his money.

THOMASVILLE, Ga.. December 23.—Wilbur ("Red") Milton, former captain and erstwhile star, of the football team of Thomasville high school and now member of the gridiron squad at Davidson college, North Carolina, is in Thomasville, to spend the holiday season with his family. Milton played center and tackle for the Davidson Wildcats this season, and his work has been of stellar variety, and considerably complimented by coaches of opposing teams that Davidson has battled with. He is a quoted as saying that, in his opinion, Johnny Branch, of the team of the University of North Carolina, is the best man in the backfield of any team against which he has played this year.

Roby this time has none other than that capable and slashing warrior, Bob Lawson, of Troy, Ala., to contest with Henry Johnson, pride of the colored colony of Pensacola, Fla., for their first brush. Johnson has come to the front so rapidly in recent months that Roby figured he deserved a short at so accomplished a battler.

Now is a chance to be helpful, even if a bit tardy. Sprinkle ashes or salt on the driveway and you can get the car out of the garage. I mean ashes from the furnace or common ice cream salt. The ashes give traction on ice. The salt melts it off.

This simple remedy that is so well known in the middle west naturally has not gained general publicity here where it never snows and rarely freezes.

I learned today—for instance—that Bob Gregg, chairman of the Shrine committee on the New Year's Day football game, had not been able to get his car up a steep driveway for two days.

Francis Clarke got his car down to the street level this morning by employing a Senegambian servitor, a rope and a log as a drag-anchor.

Twenty automobiles were ice-bound on the side of the final period. Spring street hill this morning; a wagon load of ashes scattered generously about would have made the hill negotiable.

in the right way when Henry Webber, promoter, brings Milo Steinborn and Jim Londos together in the main match of his card slated for the auditorium on the night of January 1.

Steinborn made a good impression on the fans here in his last appearance some time ago and will work again by reason of his popularity. Londos is also well known and well liked here. He has shown before Atlanta fans on several occasions and has always impressed them with his skill. He is clever and very strong. Webber is searching his files for another good pair of wrestlers for his preliminary bout and promises that the curtain-raiser will push the main match for the interest of fans.

Members of the two Southern conference all-star football teams, here for their charity game on New Year's Day, have been invited to attend the match.

FAIR WEATHER NEW YEAR'S

One who believes in the old-fashioned law of averages can be of good cheer. Records show that the mean temperature for New Year's Day in Atlanta is 40 degrees and that it has not rained nor snowed in ten years on that date.

Unless the antarctic cap has been jarred loose by Commander Byrd and has skidded up this far, the snow and the slush will be gone and New Year's Day will be fair and fine.

That is what the committee directing the all-star charity football game believes, anyhow, and they are selling tickets right along. Reduced rates on railroads has given a boom to out-of-town orders. Knoxville fans, for instance, are coming on the "Hack and Mack Special" to whoop and yell for Hackman and McEver, the two Volunteer backs who will play with the Northern division team.

A note from Leonard Sacks, business manager, chaperon, Praises Branch secretary of the treasury and ambassador-at-large for Jack Dempsey says that Jack has come to terms with the American egion Post No. 1 to referee the star bout here January 7.

Sacks is the greatest source of Dempsey "copy." He is a close friend and confidant of Dempsey, handles all his business affairs and his social obligations. Sacks has the instinct of a trained newspaper man for fea-ture stories and the skill of a born press agent in carelessly dropping priceless data.

Dempsey's frank open personality is enough to keep him favorable light with the public, but the genius of Leonard Sacks helps keep the ex-champion on the crest of popularity.

Red and Black Defeats New Holland Athletic Club, 55-15.

By K. Anderson.

ATHENS, Ga., Dec. 23.—Displaying improved teamwork and a keener eye for the basket, the University of Georgia cagemen crumbled the New Holland Athletic Club, 55 to 15, here

The Red and Black clearly outfought and out-generaled the scrappy Gainesville team, which never lagged, though faced with odds. Captain Henry Palmer took the tip off from Joe Martin as the game started and proceeded to score before a second had passed. Goals folloed in quick succession and the Athenians were on their way, never to be headed. Coach George Keene used two full teams during the game, dividing the time about equally between them. The second-stringers took the floor about five minutes before the half, and retired about the middle of the final period. Coach Keene had charge of the team in the absence of Coach H. J. Stegeman, who is severed to the summer of the same and their university.

There was much enthusiasm for the players as they were introduced; the coaches received a fine reception but it remained for the chunky little man, to take his hearers up with the eloquence that only he has and arouse in them again their pride in their state and their university.

There is an impending pitched battle between the highbrows and the lowbrows in our universities, according to the warning sounded by the lowbrows in our universities, according to the warning sounded by Dean Henry Wyman Holmes, of the graduate school of education of Harvard. Speaking before the Massachusetts Coaches' Association the other night, he said: "You will have to stress mass athletics instead of these highly specialized groups if you want to win in the coming battle between educators and athletic forces."

The statement of the dean is characterized as an ultimatum, which makes it look as though the college professors of the country were preparing to marshal their forces against the coaches. It has all the earmarks of a long-drawn-out war which will spread from campus to campus until the entire educational system of the United States is involved in the strife.

Catalank company the control of those old-timers in the value of those old-timers might have beater them.

The stand of the undergraduates is uncertain.

With this great struggle in imminent prospect it might be just as well to inquire into the causes, naturally with the object of averting this fratricidal strife, if possible. These seem to be the overemphasis of the athletic side of college life and the underemphasis of the academic side. At least this is what a neutral infers from what can be seen through the gathering clouds of war. The remedy would seem to be not to reduce the emphasis on football

Here the college professors seem to be lacking. It looks as though it should be up to them to make the academic side so attractive that the undergraduates would at least have as much affection for the head of a department as they have for a football coach who turns in a satisfactory number of victories a season. Perhaps this might seem like unfair competition. But is it?

claim is that football and other athletic training is just as necessary and desirable for college men in the preparation for after life as the academic training. It would seem up to the heads of departments to keep the students convinced that the academic training is at least as important as the athletic preparation.

There has been a growing acrimony on the part of the academic side toward the athletic side because it seems fairly well established that the salary of a successful football coach exceeds that of the head of a department, and in some instances that of a university president. Hence the cause of this collegiate war—if it comes—will be like the cause of nearly all wars, economic. As it obviously seems impossible to establish partity in economic of fans constantly ask me why there are no more great English heavyweight champions. They figure that an island which produced such men as Jack Broughton, father of boxing; Mendoza, Henry Pearce, the game chicken, who retired undefeated; "Dutch Sam" Elias, the Whitechapel Hebrew; William Thompson, known as "Bendigo;" Jem Ward, champion of England for 15 years and also a fine landscape painter (Robert Zuppke please notice); Tom Sayers, Jem Mace, Charlie Mitchell and Bob Fitzsimmons, should continue to breed great pugilists.

THREE BEST.

The three best fighters I ever knew, pound-for-pound, probably were Bob Fitzsimmons, Harry Greb and Jimmy Wilde, and two of the three were Englished. Wilde, and two of the three were Eng-lish born. Broughton was not what we'd call a big man. Mendoza weighed 160, Pearce stood 5 feet 9 inches and weighed 175 pounds. Like Joe Gans, he died of tuberculosis. Dutch Sam weighed little over 130. He only stood 5 feet 6 inches. Bendigo was a tall middleweight, although he might have scaled a few pounds under that have scaled a few pounds under that limit. Jem Ward was a light-heavy-have scaled a few pounds under that limit. Jem Ward was a light-heavy weight. Sayers, Mace, Mitchell and Bob Fitzsimmons were all somewhere between the middleweight and light-heavy class. But they all beat heavy-weights, even little Dutch Sam.

OTHER CHAMPS.

Among English champions who were real heavyweights were Jack Slack, 40m Johnson, who was 5 feet 10 inches and weighed 202 pounds, and who beat the 240-pound Isaac Perrins, England's first Jess Willard; Tom Cribb, Tom Spring, John Gully, Ben Brain and Tom King. Other good heavy men were Deaf Burke, who, like Slack, was about Tom Sharkey's build; Bill Neat, William Perry, the "Tipton Slasher," and a few more.

But the point I wish to make is that most of the men who made England famous as the boxing center of the world were not giants, but smaller men who could lick giants. As the art of fighting with the fists spread there developed a class which had the speed, science and courage of the giant-killers, added to more weight and power. Pound-for-pound, Fitz was a better fighter than Jeffries—as big Jeff is the first to tell anybody—but not man-for-man. Jess was too big for freckled Bob.

MODERNS BETTER.

And I believe that Fitz, Jeff, Demp-

Sharkey hit Loughran.

NOTHING NEW.

There isn't anything new. The fans disliked Tom Spring for the same reason many didn't like Gene Tunney—they thought he was too nice, too "high-hat." They rooted for Bill Neat, the butcher, against Spring, but Tom won, through superior boxing ability.

John Gully was really the man who most resembled Tunney. Gully was the son of an innkeeper, and John, general errand boy, was intended to be a butcher. It just happened that the youngster had sincere faith in himself, an immense loyalty to an idea and determination, capacity for work, and patience past understanding. He early announced this three ambitions to his family and close friends, who had a fine laugh. John, bellbop at an inn which was no much of a road house even for that day, only aimed to be champion of England, to own a horse which would win the Derby and become a member of parliament. It just happened he did all three. It was well those others had their laugh first.

Fellow dubs, whether you grip with five fingers, the palms, overlap or clinch the old shinny in the teeth, here's an argument that's tough to brush aside. Morrison is certain his grip is the most positive of them all.

Hereafter in matching ball players and football players in ring warfare the promoter should cut down the business to two rounds, so that all concerned will understand the athletes will be able to stand up, whether hit or not. Old Atlanta Boy Thinks Dobby Will Have Winning Team.

By Ralph McGill.

Johnny Dobbs has landed one of the best hitting outfielders in the minor leagues in Ed Brown, according to Bob Smith, Atlanta boy and old Agoga player who is now a member of the Boston Braves' pitching staff. Brown was purchased by the Crack-ers from Toledo in the American asso-ciation. The Mudhens had purchased ciation. The Mudhens had purchased him from the Braves and Smith knew him intimately.

"For the first time since I left Atlanta to play ball I believe a winning club has been lined up," said Smith yesterday when he paid a visit to the Cracker office. NEW YORK, Dec. 23.—(United News.)—The indoor track and field season of 1929-30 will be something in the nature of a preparatory school for 1932 Olympic, a survey of the fast approaching campaign revealed today.

The international aspect of the indoor meets will move into something of a decline this winter. Italy and Poland will be represented, but there are no Nurmis or Wides to supply the international tone that has whooped up recent indoor meetings.

FEW FOREIGNERS.

FEW FOREIGNERS.

Jack Elder, Notre Dame track and football ace, may grace local programs this season. His 97-yard run which won the Notre Dame-Army game alone put him into popular fancy and fans would answer his scheduled appearances with tickets and huzzahs.

Perry, tackles; Hillsinger and Humber, guards; Miller, Center; Carver, quarterback; Hutchinson and Captain Cagle, halfbacks, and Murrell, fullback.

While the Cadets were taking things relatively easy, Stanford's varsity and the All-Star eastern eleven that will face a similar western team on New Year's Day engaged in one of the most vicious scrimmages ever seen on the Stanford practice field, and one that may cost the easterners the service of Tommy Dowler, Colgate fullback. Dowler suffered a badly bruised knee that may keep him from further Chuck Smalling, giant Stanford fullback.

What the meets will lack in foreign developing much needed American runners. The A. A. OUSTING OF ORDINARY IS AFFIRMED BY COURT

J. S. Lee Loses Bacon County Post by Decision-Byrd Fills Place.

A decision of the Bacon county suthe office of ordinary, was affirmed Club. by the Georgia supreme court in an opinion rendered Monday.

Lee's right to the office.

In his petition Byrd alleged that he had been elected ordinary in 1924, to serve from January 1, 1925, for four years and until a duly elected successor was installed; and that he held office until April 29, 1929, when a court order was served upon him to turn the records of the office over to Lee.

He alleged that Lee, at the time of his election in November, 1928, was not a qualified voter of the county, because his taxes were not paid in full; constitutionally disqualifying him. The superior court of Bacon county upheld him in his contentious, declaring the office vacant. The decision of the supreme court affirmed that of the lower court except as to the vacancy existing. The law is, the court said, that the predecessor in office, under such circumstances, would continue to hold the office.

Judge Patterson ever received any money other than his lawful cost, and in no case did the indictments charge that he had actually received any money whatever, other than his cost. The indictments simply charged that the warrants were issued for the purpose of extorting money, which charge was denied by Judge Patterson so far as he is personally concerned.

He acted in good faith all the way through and whatever wrong was done was the result of his lack of knowledge of procedure, for in no case is it admitted or charged that he received any money except his cost nor in fact did he receive any money."

GIGANTIC WHALE TO BE EXHIBITED HERE EIGHT DAYS

Stretching his vast bulk more than 50 feet from head to tail, and weighing more than 66 tons, the gigantic whale captured recently off the California coast will arrive here Friday. December 27, and be on exhibition in a special railroad car on a siding at Boulevard and Tenth street, N. E., for eight days.

The huge animal, which came near taking the lives of his captors before he was conquered, lies under a glass case. The whale has been perfectly preserved by embalming, a process which required more than 38 barrels of fluid.

A new preparation known as "Siticicide," being a liquid, thoroughly penetrates the skin, going into every pore, crevice and wrinkle where parasites hide, and kills every one of these parasites with one application, in thirty minutes.

Sit-i-cide is immediately effective in destroying parasitic itch (scabies) and is sold by all druggists at 60c, or sent direct upon receipt of price. Sit-i-cide Co., Inc., Commerce, Ga.—(adv.)

CITY OF ATLANTA MAY CLOSE YEAR WITHOUT DEFICIT

Atlanta's financial household is being placed in order by employes of the comptroller's office, in preparation for the closing of the books for 1929, it was announced Monday.

All of the city's employes have been paid their full December salaries, and all other vouchers to be paid this year have been issued, said Comptroller B. Graham West. Tax payments continue to come in, said Mr. West. "Saturday's receipts exceeded $20,000. If this scale continues, we hope to close the city's books without a deficit," he said, "although water receipts do not quite approximate the amount anticipated when the budget was compiled."

CHRISTMAS EVE CALENDAR FEATURES MANY PARTIES

Santa Begins Traditional World-Wide Trip Tonight

Santa Claus, that dear, fat, jolly, whitebearded old fellow with the fat tummy wno slides down chimneys every Christmas eve, and spreads happiness wherever he goes, is actually having his identity questioned by the modern American child! Santa Claus, who is the acknowledged patron saint of American children, is more alive and bubbling over with merriment than he has been in all the centuries of his existence, for the Christmas of today, like the entire modern world, has embraced love, service, unselfishness and charity at Christmas time to a greater degree than ever before in the history of mankind. In spite of the modern trend of thought, the materialistic ideas that are affoat, and the present age of doubt and analyzation in which we are living, there is something about the holy celebration of the birthday of the Christ Child that

Washington Seminary Faculty Honored.

A very enjoyable occasion was th Christmas dinner at which L. D. Scott and Miss Emma Scott enter-tained the faculty and resident pupils of the Washington seminary last evening. Preceding dinner, Christmas carols were sung by the students, who carried red candles suggestive of the holiday spirit.

The stately dining room seemed built just for a Christmas dinner. Its deep red walls with ivory woodwork made an appropriate background for the table with its red Christmas candles and its many gay little Christmas trees. Everyone joined in the singing of carols and hymns between the courses. Much merriment was produced at the last by articles drawn from Christmas bags.

"The Little Mixer" was read by Mrs. Merrill Hutchinson, and Miss Margaret Battle sang selections appropriate to the season.

The principal event of Friday was the Christmas tree given by the pupils of the school to children less fortunate than themselves. There was a doll for every girl, toys little boys like, and horns for everyone. The Salvation Army officers carried stockings to those unable to be present. The vacation period will be over January 6. The stately dining room seemed Right away things began to happen. It was one of Spooky's claws, of which he could see only a little, that ened away by Spooky's hissing and the snapping of his bill. But he was sure that there were some more borers in that tree and he meant to have them in spite of Spooky. So as soon as he thought that Spooky was surely asleep again, Drummer returned and went to work on that tree. He found a soft place. The wood was very much rotted along that crack. Drummer didn't have to hammer hard to cut into it. He only had to tap lightly. He didn't pound hard enough to waken Spooky. It wasn't necessary. But suddenly, as Drummer's head flew back and forth, back and forth, and that sharp bill of his made little chips of rotted wood fly this way and that way, that same sharp bill went right through into nothing. The unistant Drummer knew what that meant. "Huh!" said Drummer to himself. "I've cut right through into that wall. I've gone right through into that hole." I've cone right through into that hole." "Huh!" said Drummer to himself.

"I've cut right through that wall. I've gone right through into that hollow. Well, I ought to find some grubs in here somewhere. I'll just cut a little bigger opening here and see what there is to be found."

Perhaps you know something of how Drummer felt. Perhaps you have some time dug a hole into a little cave and felt excited when you broke through into the cave. That is the way it was with Drummer. He kept pecking away and pecking away and making the hole larger and larger. Presently, as he squinted in at the hole he was making, he thought he saw agrub. Anyway, he saw something that looked-like a grub. Drummer had learned by experience that the only way to make sure of a grub.

CARDINALS TO VISIT POPE ON CHRISTMAS

Brief But Touching Ceremony in Vatican City Has Added Importance.

VATICAN CITY, Dec. 23.-(A)-Christmas eve in Vatican City will be marked by the annual visit of all the cardinals of the curia to Pope Pius to wish him the season's greet-

Pius to wish him the season's greetings and to hear his reply enumerating the "joys and sorrows" of the year drawing to a close. Cardinal Hayes, of New York, and Cardinal Hayes, of New York, and Cardinal Daugherty, of Philadelphia, will represent American Catholics.

The brief but touching ceremony this year takes added importance, since, by reason of the Lateran treaties concluded last February, the pope is now an independent sovereign, secure in his sway over the Vatican City state. But no change in the ceremonial observed during all the years of self-imposed captivity from 1870 to 1928 is contemplated.

The pope began Christmas week by issuing an encyclical recounting the many reasons why his jubilee year had been crowded with joy and consolation. One of them was the solusolation. One of them was the solu-tion of the Roman question, which had been received joyfully throughout the world and especially in Italy. SYNOPSIS

John Andrew Kellogg, heir to millions, asks Barbara Thoraton to marry him. She agrees, but not very graclously. When ashe hears that he has just lost his job she scolds him and calls him a playboy. He calls on his attorney, David Craig, who tells him that he will never inherit the money his father left if he doean't prove himself capable of managing his life in a seasible way. He tells him that since he has lost one job rate of the control of the contr that he will see her in Los Angeles in a few days.

Arrived in San Francisco John Andrew meets an old school friend, Peter Merriam, on the street. Fete is selling Mercury cars and tries to sell one to John Andrew. They go for a trial spin and with John Andrew at the wheel have a slight smashup. In order to save Pete from losing his job John Andrew was grees to buy the custom built Mercury. Back at the hotel an old man is waiting to see John Andrew He has an invastion that he wants John Andrew to put his money into. John Andrew finally gives him part of the money he had for expenses and writes out a contract to the effect that he will share 50-50 in the sale of the machine. He doesn't even ask what the machine is for.

INSTALLMENT XIV. HEADED SOUTH.

Clear across the lobby, through the corridor, up the elevator, John Andrew found it, and watched the officer write industriously.

"Case comes up in five days," John Andrew kept whistling; he was whistling as he entered the room and while he closed the door; the click of the key, as if it might have been a raised phonograph needle, stopped all sound. He walked to the largest chair, facing a window, and, slowly, sat down; for a long time he did not move, except to light a cigaret, or to knock off ash. Once he said, "O. Lord," and tried to smile, but for all his effort, his lips remained bitter.

A thin yellow pad of telegraph.

A thin yellow pad of telegraph.

A thin yellow pad of telegraph blanks on the desk caught his eye, but instead of writing the message to Craig which he had almost decided upon, he counted what money he had, down to nickels and dimes. Just short of a hundred. Two dollars he placed in his yest pocket—round silver dollars of the west; when he was down to them he'd wire Craig.

"I might as well take a good licking while I'm at it," thought John Andrew said miserably, "Well, you see—"

"If you was buyin' it on time, fella, it might be different, but I see from the certif-cate here that you paid the certif-cate here th bile, one perpetual motion machine, and 92 dollars and 40 cents . . no; I've got 20 more in the bank, which makes it overa hundred.'

Because he didn't need anything further to depress him, Anne's laughing, "I suppose you'll be driving down in a Rolls to see me?" flashed beforehim. No; not in a Rolls. In a Mercury.

The custom built roadster, new fender in place, body glistening, glass sparkling, headlights reflecting the sun in silvery rays, raced through towns asleep in the lazy dawn.

Past lumbering trucks bearing milk or vegetables the Mercury hastened, the engine risen to a powerful, monotonous drone as gasoline shot into the cylinders.

Eight of John Andrew's now percious dollars had gone for the hotel room; four more—$4.20, since John Andrew was now being exact—for food. The Mercury's tank had been filled when it was delivered, but $2.4 had gone for oil, since John Andrew wanted a particular brand, and didn't know what was already in the crank case. He knew what he had spent, and what he had left; knew this much better than why he was heading south. Craig would say, "I expected it," when, John Andrew had no intention of relating what had happened; how he'd been nicely cleaned before he'd had a real chance to attempt fulfilling the clause of the will. Off to make his fortume, in a custom built road ster, paid for with the money itself:

"If I bired the Mercury out at three dollars," John Andrew figured, remembering the cars with similar signs parked around Union square, "and it was used every hour in the month, or in the 29 days left . . I wouldn'th have anywhere near enough. Maybe I could run liquor in it up from Mex. your eold:

I wouldn't have anywhere near enough. Maybe I could run liquor in it up from Mexico. Maybe a rich old lady'll adopt me. Of I might go for a walk in the desert, and fall into a hole and have oil come gushing up. Or find a stiff game and hold straights and fours.

Or . . "

John Andrew was not given to self-pity, but it seemed as though the jade green roadster meant to align itself with the forces which intended to lick Kellogg as thoroughly as he had asked.

The Mercury, John Andrew's foot pressing heavier, sped ahead. The hum of the engine began to sing to its driver: "Fool! fool! fool!"

Why go south? Very logically (but having nothing to do with that question) John Andrew decided (a), that Anne was just a good sort, and (b), in a day or two he'd forget all about her, as she had him, and (c), that just because he'd fallen down in the task set before him oughtn't to make any difference, since she didn't know about it, and (d), if you really liked something nothing else should make something nothing else should make

This, he saw, was getting him nowhere, but, as if he were suddenly increasingly auxious to drive the Mercury up to the place Anne was staying, he increased the speed of the

He stopped for gasoline, automatically considering the mileage, and then sent the custom built roadster speeding forward, over a winding highway which swept over arroyos filled with grazing cattle; the hills were more barren, the towns farther part, the castward Sierras swimming. apart, the eastward Sierras swimming

"I'm going south just to let Anne see I wasn't bluffing," he said aloud, near the outskirts of a village. "I'll say, 'No Rolls I liked in San Francisco, and I'm partial to American cars anyhow, but will this do?' She'll say—she'll say—darn it, she'll prob-

"Was I doing forty-five?" John Andrew asked. "License? I've got a New York one somewhere . . . isn't it good here?" He pulled out his wal-let and investigated. "I've got one somewhere.""

"Yeah. They all have."
John Andrew found it, and watched the officer write industriously.

"That's up to the judge, but since I didn't chase you and you stopped when I give you the sign, he'll only soak you a dollar a mile over the twenty."

John Andrew did something he had never done in all his life: "Couldn't you make it thirty silve miles instead."

Aside from a transient bulge at the Aside from a transient bulge at the opening today and upturns near the finish, wheat was dominated almost together by breaks in security prices and by evidence that European buying of wheat from North America had again flattened out for at least the time being. T unsient advances in price here early were in response to a sharp rise in quotations at Liverpool, and to the fact that the supply of wheat on ocean passage was announced as having fallen to less than half the total at this time list year. The stimulus from such developments, however, failed to survive in the face of stock market disturbance, and there was little apparent result either from estimates that the world carry-over of wheat this season is likely to be 50,000,000 bushels less than was recently forecast.

be 50,000,000 bushels less than was recently forecast.

Adding at times today to the downward momentum of the wheat market were advices that re-sellers in Europe were offering wheat 3c a bushel cheaper than the grain could be obtained on this side of the Atlantic Furthermore, new export business in wheat today from the United States and Canada was said to total but 200,000 bushels, and there were reports that Kansas, the banner wheat-producing state, besides having an increased acreage this season, shows a crop condition 12 per cent better than average. On the other hand, official estimates of 1929 wheat production in France were asserted today to show 38,000,000 bushels curtailment from the latest private forecast.

Upturns in the value of hogs helped to steady the provisions market.

NEW YORK, Dec. 23—(P)—The bond market was irregular today in the dullest five-hour session in the last two months. Turnovers in domestic corporation loans were exceptionally small, and much of the business was in the foreign group, where a downward trend prevailed.
With money at 5 per cent for time funds and 5 and 5 1-2 for call loans, commitments were exceedingly light. However, buying orders virtually balanced offerings and the result was net changes of inconsequential proportions. First grade rails held their ground and the undertone of the entire list had a firm appearance, although United States governments eased on the smallest volume in some time.

and 1961 loans were sold on profit-taking from the levels attained on the bonds' recoveries of late last week. Most of the declines were fractional. Other Latin-American obligations showed a downward trend, with Bra-zilian securities fairly active. Promi-nent European governments were steady. These prices seemed to bring in a little more southern selling while the demand tapered off after the more urgent demand from shorts had been supplied and the market eased during the afternoon under renewed liquidation or realizing of recent buyers.

Closing quotations were 10 to 15 points off from the best.

The action of the market was regarded by some traders as reflecting an improvement in the technical position and some other observers felt that there were indications of a slightly law or general buying interest as well as covering by shorts. MARKET DULL.

NEW ORLEANS, Dec. 23.—(A)—
Pre-Christmas dullness characterized the cotton market today and although the opening was easier and prices declined slightly after the start, the market experienced a sharp technical rally later in the day which was helped by a fair trade demand and some covering. The rally, however, did not hold and January contracts which had sold up from 16.85 to 17.06, closed at 16.94; or one point down. The general market closed steady net one point up to one point down.

Liverpool cables were decidedly unfavorable and influenced an opening decline here of 4 to 5 points. The market continued to recede slowly in early trading under pre-holiday liquidation and January sold off to 16.85, March 17.13 and May 17.59, or 9 to 13 points down. MARKET DULL.

Farrell president of the United States Steel Corp., said of the steel industry today. "there has been no inflation in prices, in inventories nor in capacity, and there is no apparent reason why 1930 should got be a good average year, with stable prices and stable wages." He predicted a substantial upturn in operations after the first of the year.

The continued selling was still largely attributed to selling for tax purposes and to professional bearish operations. In its present movement, however, the market is merely following precedent in entering into a steady decline after the first sharp rally from the low levels of the selling panic. With this in mind, operators for the advance have found little incentive to renew activity of late. Precedent 9 Am Sugar Ref

> Penny Company And Sears-Roebuck Drop Merger Plan

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.—(A)—E. C. Sams, president of the J. C. Penney Company, who operate a nation-wide chain of 1,400 retail dry goods and apparel stores, announced today that Mr. Sams said that no basis for a merger had been found during a study of ts economic advantages by the executives of both companies. "The possibility of the J. C. Penney Company's trained personnel handling the lines developed by the mail order house, in addition to lines developed by the Penney company in its 1,400 dry goods and apparel stores, was the occasion of the study," said the statement, "but since no basis for a merger was found negotiations have been definitely terminated."

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.—Trading in cotton broadened considerably today due to decreased liquidation in January, improved drygoods news and builish news from India. The market was also more two-sided than it has been at one time values sold down a half-a-dollar a bale and then rallied twice as much but ended without material change. Cables from Bombay giving the estimate of Volkart Bros., of the Indian crop coupled with the irregular prediction of a deficit in the exportable surplus equal to about 600,000 baless of American cotton changed course of the market.

NEW YORK. Dec. 23:—Trade calling of cotton was responsible for higher prices in today's market. Covering added to this demand. This resulted in a little broader range of fluctuations and a net gain in prices for the day reports on cloth business done in the local market were optimistic. While this was no less than we expected yet wide distribution of the news naturally had a broader influence.

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.—The trend of stock prices was twice reversed in today's session, in which professional operations held sway. The list was under constant pressure throughout the first half of the session, many issues breaking below their previous 1920 lows and the coppers evidencing special.

JACKSON BROS., BOESEL & CO.

NEW YORK. Dec. 23.—A steady atream of scattered liquidation, heavy tax selling and heavy professional short-selling featured the opening day of the last week in the year. It is worth noting that stocks are taken in large volume on nominal declines and that it requires very little buying to effect 3 or 4-point raillies. It is apparent that bargain hunters have appeared in Wall Street to take advantage of yearend tax selling. The full effect of this careful investment buying should be felt when all the tax selling has been absorbed.
It will take considerable time, however, to restore complete market equilibrium. That stock which has suffered has disintegrated a long list of speculative groups and ogganized operations on the bull side will be severely curtailed. JACKSON BROS., BOESEL & CO.

Withdrawal of Speculators And Tax Sales Speed Decline

STANLEY W. PRENOSIL.

Associated Press Financial Editor.

NEW YORK, Dec. 23.—(P)—

Christmas week on the New York Curb Exchange opened with the general course of prices still downward, and with few signs of effective buying support. A few rallies developed during the session and while some of the 'llosses were cut down, fresh offerings invariably appeared on the rebounds. Trading was only moderately heavy in character, the day's sales falling just below 900,000 shares.

Unfavorable business news, tax selling, withdrawal of a large army of speculators from the market and the resultant suspension of pool operations were all set forth as reasons for the decline. In some quarters, however, the market was believed to be indulging in the normal 'secondary reaction' which invariably follows the first sustained rally after a major break such as took place last month. Public utilities were again the principal targets of bear pressure, presumably because this group of securities had been more widely distributed and had recorded larger advances than any other in the recent 'bull' market. Standard Power & Light dropped and had recorded larger advances than any other in the recent 'bull' market. Democratic Head Says
Wood's Statement Must
Have Approval of President—Denies Circulating Story.

Representative Garner, of Texas, the democratic leader, through the national committee, said last night that there was nothing reprehensible in the discussion of public questions by the president with individual callers, and that no one could hold the president responsible for "what some third party says someone told him the president said to someone eise."

WASHINGTON, Dec. 23.—(P)—
A White House background was attributed from democratic sources to day to the picture presented by Representative Wood, of Indiana, chairman of the national republican congressional committee, as an answer that President Hoover had taken a hand in the sugar tariff controversy.

Jouett Shouse, chairman of the democratic national executive committee, said in a statement that the assertions of Wood "must be taken as a correct exposition of the president's position, issued with the consent and authority of Mr. Hover himself and thoover make a public explanation of testimony before the senate lobby committee by H. Shattuck testified that he did not discuss the tariff with the president, but that he had conferred with Walter Newton, one of the president's secretaries, regarding it.

Shouse said that Wood "would hardly have ventured to issue such a statement" without the authorization of the president.

The members of the local Camp Fire other dress was made to supplement groups purchased the entire allotment it and allow a "complete change."

102ndChristmas

ASHEVILLE, N. C., Dec. 23.-(4)

Allen Buckner, Confederate veteran, is looking forward to a big Christmas,

"Uncle Allen" as he is known throughout this section will rele-brate Christmas with his annual birthday party with members of his family in the cabin where 70 combination Christmas-birthday dinners have been eaten with his relatives.

"Uncle Allen" was educated in this section of the state and was educated in a little log schoolhouse near where he now lives. At that time Indians and wild animals roved this section, which was a veritable wilderness. He is the father of four living children, the "baby" being 67 years old.

They flocked to Washington and into vacant apartments, private homes and the mushroom dormitories which a government, rich in money and proud in its patriotism, had built for them. From every part of these United States they came, gave their names: ages and addresses to personnel officers and clerks and, after a cursory check of secret service men, were assigned to work.

Georgia furnished her quota. At 4:30 in the afternoon, when the mass of routine had been laid aside for the day, the cavernous buildings that housed these feminine patriots began to empty and the thousands of young and carried both, invariably, to the

"And I've always had turkey and all the trimmings, too," put in Ardrey. The only epicurean difference in the way the two families observed Christmas, it developed, was that Clara Belle always had her dinner in the middle of the day and with Ardrey it had ever been a 6 o'clock affair.

But what about the turkey?

"Yes, what about it," chimed Clara Belle, waxing a trifle sarcastic.

"You know we can buy one at the market," interposed Ardrey.

"And then do what with it?" asked Clara Belle.

Followed a lengthy discussion of whether to get a turkey or not to have one, how to cook it after they had gotten it, what to serve with it and, most important, whether to have their respective boy friends eat with them. Everything else settled, for the time being, until they reached a discussion of how to kill Mr. Gobbler, or Mrs. Turkey Hen.

"I can't stand the sight of blood," said Clara Belle, when Ardrey had suggested that they borrow the janitor's ax and amputate the neck of the bird. Ardrey was almost as chickenhearted about taking fowl life: that's why she had eagerly proposed that Clara Belle do the slaughtering.

Lethal Death Decided On.

Lethal Death Decided On.

One plan after another was advanced, such as having the bird shot, of asking a boy friend to commit the bloody murder and, in desperation, of scalding to death. All were discarded when into Ardrey's nimble mind flashed an idea: They would chloroform Mr. Turkey, pick the last feather, off and put him in the ice box to await the dawn of cooking day. The Emperor Napoleon, in their own joint of adolescent culinary opinion, never had a more brilliant and destructive idea. Lethal Death Decided On.

So to market they went one Thursday, fetching back a nice ten-pound bird to be kept until the following evening when they would finish a patched-up dinner and get ready for the execution of the idea—and, they felt sure, the turkey as well. Chloroform was purchased on the way to the apartment Friday afternoon; gobs of water heated during the preparation of the meal, and the stage all set for a lethal killing.

Fowldom's sacrifice to Christianity was brought upstairs and the painless, bloodless opiate administered in what seemed, to two young ladies whose principal education had been confined to the arts of reading modern novels and the science of beguling bids to fraternity dances, a more So to market they went one Thurs-ern novels and the science of beguing bids to fraternity dances, a more than ample dose to kill and to keep killed. The immediate reaction was all that could have been desired. The gobbler fluttered about a bit, kicked twice, and lapsed into the unconsciousness peculiar to the bird kingdom—wheferes that is whatever that is.

Bird Put On Ice.

Picking the feathers off proved to be more of a task than cither of these sacrificing-for-country young ladies counted. Especially pin feathers. They started before 7 o'clock and it was now after S and they had a dath to be at a 9 o'clock movie. They gor to the place where they thought a few minutes' effort next morning, a holiday, anyway, would make a clean job of it, and, in furtherance of their preconcuved plan, put the turkey in the ice box. Although it was typical winter weather, and a chilling breeze could be let in the kichenette, they were taking no chances of the turk's spoiling.

What they did at the picture show, the boys who escorted them back home to make mild whoopee Christmas eve and the prayers, if any, they uttered when they went to bed that night has nothing to do with this story. It is the license of this peddleg of tidings, as well as his duty, to draw the curtain over this. Bird Put On Ice.

tain over this. Let's move the clock to that hour when human resistance is at its lowest ebb: 2 o'clock in the morning.

Clara Bell moved slightly in bed, as if in that twilight which separates a plain nod from a sound sleep. She innocently threw her hand over Ardrey's face and that vivacious person aroused to consciousness.

"What's the big idea?" she demanded. Thump, Thump, Thumping.

No answer. But Ardrey began hear-ng a thump, thump, thump. It eemed to be everywhere and at the same time very vague. The thumping grew to intermittent knocking, as if some one were trying a door across the hall. Ardrey then waked Clara

"Listen, s-sh, what's that?" she said in a half whisper.

Clara Bell heard it, then, and hesitated. Whether to turn on the light or lie still and demand to know from whence came the racket. The volume and frequency increased. Ardrey settled the family indecision by jumping out of bed and cutting on a light. Half frantically, for the noise went away for a minute, they moved about the apartment, sheepishly looking under the bed, inspecting the bath room an dgiving the kitchenette a close examination. Nothing to be seen.

That knocking, now more insistent,

That knocking now more insistent, broke out again. Five and six knocks at a time—but where? Clara Bell looked at Ardrey for a sign, but what she got was one of those thoroughly disconcerting shrugs of the shoulder.

The red-head was awaiting developments, planning to meet each crisis as it came. Not so with the Georgia blonde. What are those fat coppers for anyway, if not to protect poor government workers?

"Central? Police, please, and quick!"

"Police station, desk sergeant speaking."
"Send us a policeman, two of them, right away; someone is trying to break in the apartment and rob us. Please hurry up. There's been a knocking for

Policemen Enter Picture.

"What number, please?" Clara Bell supplied this minor detail and anxiously waited for the police. Two did come, the one from headquarters picking up the one on the beat. They walked in, surveyed the room with a practiced eye, exchanged glances and asked for particulars.

They got them—frenzied information. Some man had been trying to flirt with them over the telephone and now they knew he was breaking in. But he was not in the hall, for the police had not seen a soul since they left the street.

About that time there came from nowhere, it seemed, a louder series of knocks. They were repeated before anyone could utter a word. But two coppers were satisfied that there was something curious up the creek. Drawing a gun and billy, they started exploring.

Drawing a gun and billy, they statted exploring.

They eliminated all possible sources of devilment save the ice box. Uncertain about that, they moved for a flank attack when the loudest noise of all greeted them and the top of the refrigerator feebly pushed up and fell back, twice.

The cops stood at either side, ready to strike, and lifted the lid clear.

10 Opportunities' Fund Subscribed by Atlanta

BY BEN COOPER.

Tuesday there were 10 miserable little families huddled around tiny fires in their rude shacks, hoping and praying that Santa Claus will not pass them by this year.

This morning, those same 10 families will be among the happiest on earth. They will have good reason for their joy. The Ten Opportunity campaign is a success! The goal has been reached! Mr. Foreman of the Composing Room, please put it in 3-inch type. Ten of the poorest families in Atlanta will not know suffering and privation during 1930, because Atlanta subscribed $3,145.94 for their assistance.

For most of us, the year 1930 holds promise of bright things. Of big ideals, increased business, better liv-ing conditions. Thank God that it means also that the ten neediest families in this city will be taken care of.

Atlanta was called upon. Day after day a plea was made that the ten opportunity families might not be passed by. Atlanta heard and answered that plea. Atlanta did herself proud, and, good folks, this morning you can pat yourselves on the back and congratulate yourselves that you did not fail these poor people in their hour of need . . . that dark hour just before the dawn. In this case, it is a glorious dawn, radiant with hope and encouragement.

MERRY CHRISTMAS TO ALL ATLANTA.

MERRY CHRISTMAS, every-body, and a happy New Year to you all. That is the wish of the Ten Opportunity families. It is also the wish of the conductor of this column, who was on tenter-hooks all day Tuesday until the success of the campaign was Perhaps, in the rush of Christ-mas and the excitement of waiting for Santa's visit, you do not fully realize just what the success of this drive means. For one thing, it means that during the months of 1930, ten humble families will have plenty to eat. Starved bodies will be built up so that these people can have a chance to regain their health and earn their own way again. Through misfortune, they were plunged into the depths of despair. Through your generos-ity, they will be made happy and wholesome again.

It is a significant fact that out of the ten opportunities of two years ago, eight of the families now are self-supporting. They are able to take care of themselves. The help given in their hour of direct necessity gave them the start toward better things. Instead of being wards of society, they now are able to shift for themselves."

The Ten Opportunity fund is something more than Just a Christmas gift. It means 365 days of comfort for these families and their chance for rehabilitation. The fund will be adminis-tered without cost by the Family Welfare Society, which selected the 10 needlest families for The Two Subscribed Outright.

Two of the Opportunities were subscribed outright. The Fox theater took one and the local display advertising department of The Constitution took another. for these families was dark indeed. More than $600 was lacking to make the fund complete. Things soon began to change for the better, however, as the mail and the messenger boys began to come in. A number of the checks received Tuesday were large amounts, $100, $50 and $25

Colonel A. W. Baillie, of the Salvation Army, said that more than 1,500 children received toys, candy and fruit at parties staged by the army at various places in the city Monday and Tuesday. Dozens of others came to headquarters of the Salvation Army and other charitable agencies seeking food, clothing and other necessities.

Nearly 1,000 happy men, women and children, including 800 needy folk who were guests of the Atlanta Elks and the woman's auxiliary of the order, participated in the great Christmas party given Tuesday morning at the Elks' home at Peachtree and Fourth streets. The event marked the annual Yuletide celebration sponsored by the lodge and, for the first time, was held at the Elk home.

Christmas this year is a little bit better than any that has come before. That, with some few qualifications, is the consensus of a wide range of opinions gleaned about the streets of Atlanta.

The stock market may have tumbled; those sufficiently wealthy to have afforded it may have felt the pressure of the break, but amongst the mass of the people there is a feeling of happiness and prosperity. Care has been thrust away, worries pigeonholed, and the hearts and spirits of Atlanta's citizens have uniformly turned to a proper observance of the year's gladdest anniversary.

Finding the consensus of Atlanta's opinion with regard to Christmas was no great trouble. . . the streets and stores of the city were filled with shoppers, all preparing for the advent of the day. They answered readily, with a friendly cheer that itself told of their enthusiasm.

shoppers, all preparing for the advent of the day. They answered readily, with a friendly cheer that itself told of their enthusiasm.

Bigger and Better.

Is Christmas better? Is it bigger?"
The answers were both "yes" and "no." But the affirmative replies by far exceeded the negative.

Christmas, as the most of these folk understand it, is primarily a day for the children. It has its grown-up aspect, the exchange of thoughtful remembrances among friends, family gatherings—sometimes attended from far away—about the Christmas table, but in the main, as people see it, it is a children's day.

but in the main, as people see it, it is a children's day.

No chance has been taken that Christmas in this respect will not uphold its standard. Toylands everywhere have never seen such crowds before. And never has toyland had so much to offer. Toys, toys, toys, of every variety and description, for every taste and inclination, have been on display.

This year they seem to be more appealing than ever. The ingenious devices, the models and building toys have aroused no end of delighted approval.

Real Children's Day.

"Do children today enjoy Christmas more than they did when you were young?" That was a question asked dozens of people. The answer was an unhesitant "no."

Hopeful of solving the riddle of Easter ment in order to pay their college exisland, tiny land of mystery in the penses may not send many elaborate tidy little sum from the sale of Christ-

Hopeful of solving the riddle of Easter island, tiny land of mystery in the Pacific, Eldredge R. Johnson, former president of the Victor Talking Machine Company, has ordered the construction of a palatial yacht to carry him and a party of 20 scientists to its shores.

The order for the craft, which is to cost $1,500,000, was placed yesterday with a Bath (Maine) company with delivery specified for May, 1931. The yacht will be 265 feet long, and will carry two seaplanes, a radio system and a fully equipped laboratory. It will combine all the features of a seagoing yacht with those of a houseboat. The vessel will be powered with two Deisel engines and carry a crew of 35.

Johnson said he was interested in Easter island because so many of its prehistoric relics never have been investigated. Some of the mysteries he and his scientists hope to solve are:

What people first inhabited the island?

What era witnessed the carving and erection of its great stone monuments, statues, circular towers and burial platforms?

By what feats of engineering were huge blocks of stone moved from one a case of giving up the job or making a poor showing on examinations.

By what feats of engineering were thuge blocks of stone moved from one part of the island to another?

How the tiny island could have supported the army of men believed to have been necessary in the construction work?

How highly developed were the prehistoric people?

Scientists have learned little about Easter island, it is said, since Easter Day of 1722 when the first white man, a Dutch admiral, visited it and gave it its name.

The most striking monuments thus far found, Johnson said, are the burial platforms with statues surmounting them. There are known to be more than 200 of these in various degrees of preservation fringing the coast of Easter island in almost unbroken succession. Some are 300 feet long and they average 15 feet in height.

HOLIDAY DANCES
FOR PEACHTREE
GARDENS PATRONS

Announcement was made Tuesday by Frank Wooten, manager of Peachtree Gardens, of two special dances during the holiday season. One of these will be held tonight from 9 o'clock on. The other will be a New Year's eve dance, starting at 9 o'clock and ending in 1930. These dances augment the regular Saturday night dances, which will continue throughout the winter season.

The Seminole Syncopators, Atlanta's premier colored dance orchestra, well known to radio fans through WSB, will furnish the music. The leader of this orchestra has the distinction of performing for RKO radio programs. The same admission prices will prevail with no cover charge. Souvenirs will be given all guests.

HIGHALL SHORD SONE WORK Which awakens him for his day's work.

Jack Nichols had a good job with the Y. M. C. A. taking care of the symnasium at the beginning of the year. The Christmas holidays find him sharing the place with a fellow student. It happened that a freshman faced with the necessity of getting some work or leaving Emory. Jack meeded the work, but felt it was more needed by the other. He offered to make it two jobs instead of one. Two man instead of a single student now are finding the salary connected with the work quite acceptable.

Earl Lippencot has an English fellowship this year and is doing graduate work. He had roomed with Dan McMillan when they were freshmen and sophomores. Dan wasn't so successful financially and he left school for a period. He was trying to return but hadn't been able to line up any work to do. Near the opening of the year. ROYAL FAMILY "AT HOME" XMAS

The king and queen have not spent Christmas with all their children and grandchildren, since the war.

Princess Mary and her husband, the Earl of Harewood, formerly Viscount Lascelles, and their two small sons arrived last night at the palace, where little Princess Elizabeth greeted her cousins with great delight.

The Duke of Gloucester traveled together from London this afternoon, and the Prince of Wales and Prince George are expected to arrive in time to hear the village choristers sing the traditional carols this evening.

The Christmas party will be a family farewell to the Prince of Wales, who is leaving early in January to resume the African trip interrupted by the king's illness a year ago.

Following a custom he established 40 years ago, Colonel Walter R. Brown Tuesday made his annual pilgrimage to the statue of Henry W. Grady in Grady square and placed thereon a wreath of mistletoe.

In 1889 Colonel Brown, president of the Henry W. Grady Club, placed his first wreath on the statue of the immortal writer, and each year has followed the custom.

Mr. Patton says that there is no holarity about any of the work the students do. They ask for their jobs with the thought in mind that they expect to give 100 per cent service and expect to receive in return a 100 per cent salary.

My bridal robe is the gift of Goodor wisdom or integrity. It proves nothing at all except the knack of winning the support of fickle voters.

The Joy of This Day

F ALL THE DAYS we celebrate, Christmas is the one that inspires the most universal joy. Bells ring when princes are born, and toll their mournful dirge when great men pass away. Nations have their festive days, their carnivals and holidays; but once in the year, and just once, comes that happy day of world-wide observance. You cannot cut Christmas out of the calendar-nor out of the hearts of men.

Yes, Old Santa Had a Helper

PON this glorious Christmas morn when hearts are happy and cares are light, and the blessings of the day are multiplied by joyous shouts and expressions of glee from kiddies everywhere---pause to consider the workmanship of that jolly old elf, St. Nicholas!

Year after year he has toiled in behalf of the little folk. Earnestly he has sought out the humble and the rich, and with all his power, has bestowed what best he could to make tiny hearts bubble with happiness.

With hundreds of thousands of kiddies all over the world awaiting his magic call, Santa has been a busy man. In many cities and countrysides round-about old Santa has accomplished his work alone---but he has had a helper in Atlanta, aye, a helper who assisted in giving many homes in this section a touch of Christmas cheer that might otherwise have been forgotten.

The helper in Atlanta was The Atlanta Constitution who made it possible for thousands of little girls to have a beautiful "Tickletoes" Doll this Christmas, without a cent of cost to anyone. The Constitution has ever sought to be of service to its readers, and upon the approach of Christmas this year extended its search to the leading doll makers of America. The result was the presentation of "Tickletoes"---the darling baby doll that does all the cute little things of a real live baby.

And this morning--- The Constitution is proud of its effort because it has been responsible for happiness in probably more homes than any other single person or institution, excluding, of course, old Santa himself.

Even though The Constitution's job of helping Santa this year has been completed you may still take advantage of the "Tickletoes" doll or Greyhound wagon offer. The liberal requirements which were effective before Christmas will be continued.

The fact that The Constitution has more CITY, more SUBURBAN, a greater total CITY AND SUBURBAN, and GRAND TOTAL CIRCULATION than any other daily newspaper in Atlanta is proof of the ever-increasing value of its columns to the reading public.

MERRY CHRISTMAS RESOUNDS AROUND THE WORL

Holly-Covered Packages and Tinselled Trees Typify Xmas

Merry Christmas! Like an echo drifting down the annals of time come these heart-thrilling words so pleasing to the entire world, and never, never growing old. Merry Christmas! Holly-covered packages, tinseled trees, mistletoe, glowing candles, scurrying crowds and expectant boys and girls—all of this says in a word that Christmas is here again. Even snow has been added to the customary trappings of the season, glistening on fir trees and spacious lawns, to create that atmosphere of try brilliance which always adds cheer to Christmas Day.

The day of all days in the world of childhood has rolled around again. Billy and Mary and Jane, after a restless night, have found that Santa has packed their stockings, decorated their trees, hung all of the tinsel and snow and red painted toys his bundle would hold, and left them the happiest little children in all the world. Father got the gift that was nearest his heart, and now is sitting contentedly in the old arm chair, smoking and thinking that perhaps Christmas is not the worst season in the year, after all. Mother, too, feels the reflected enthusiasm of a couple of little fellows who are bubbling with joy.

The community, too, will celebrate the glad season. Churches will be open everywhere. Community trees will attest the generosity of those who found the family circle far too small for the expression of the real manning of Christmas. Families will units today about rearing vale real meaning of Christmas. Families will unite today about roaring yule logs, partake of the customary refreshments of the season and feel anew using the ring ceremony.
